SPORTS & RECREATION

Diver Wendy Satterlee

Minnesota has always been known for its active people and quality of life. That's why sports and recreation will be especially important in 1990.

For the participant and the spectator

Beyond this Olympic-caliber sports festival, there will be many other events to either participate in or watch. For example, a border-to-border bicycle tour, a sailing regatta in Duluth Harbor and a canoe voyage down the mighty Mississippi.

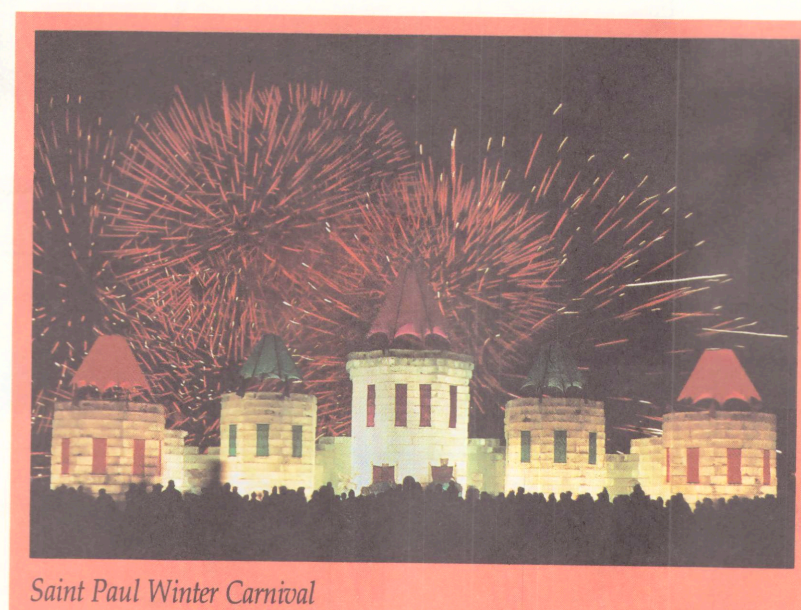

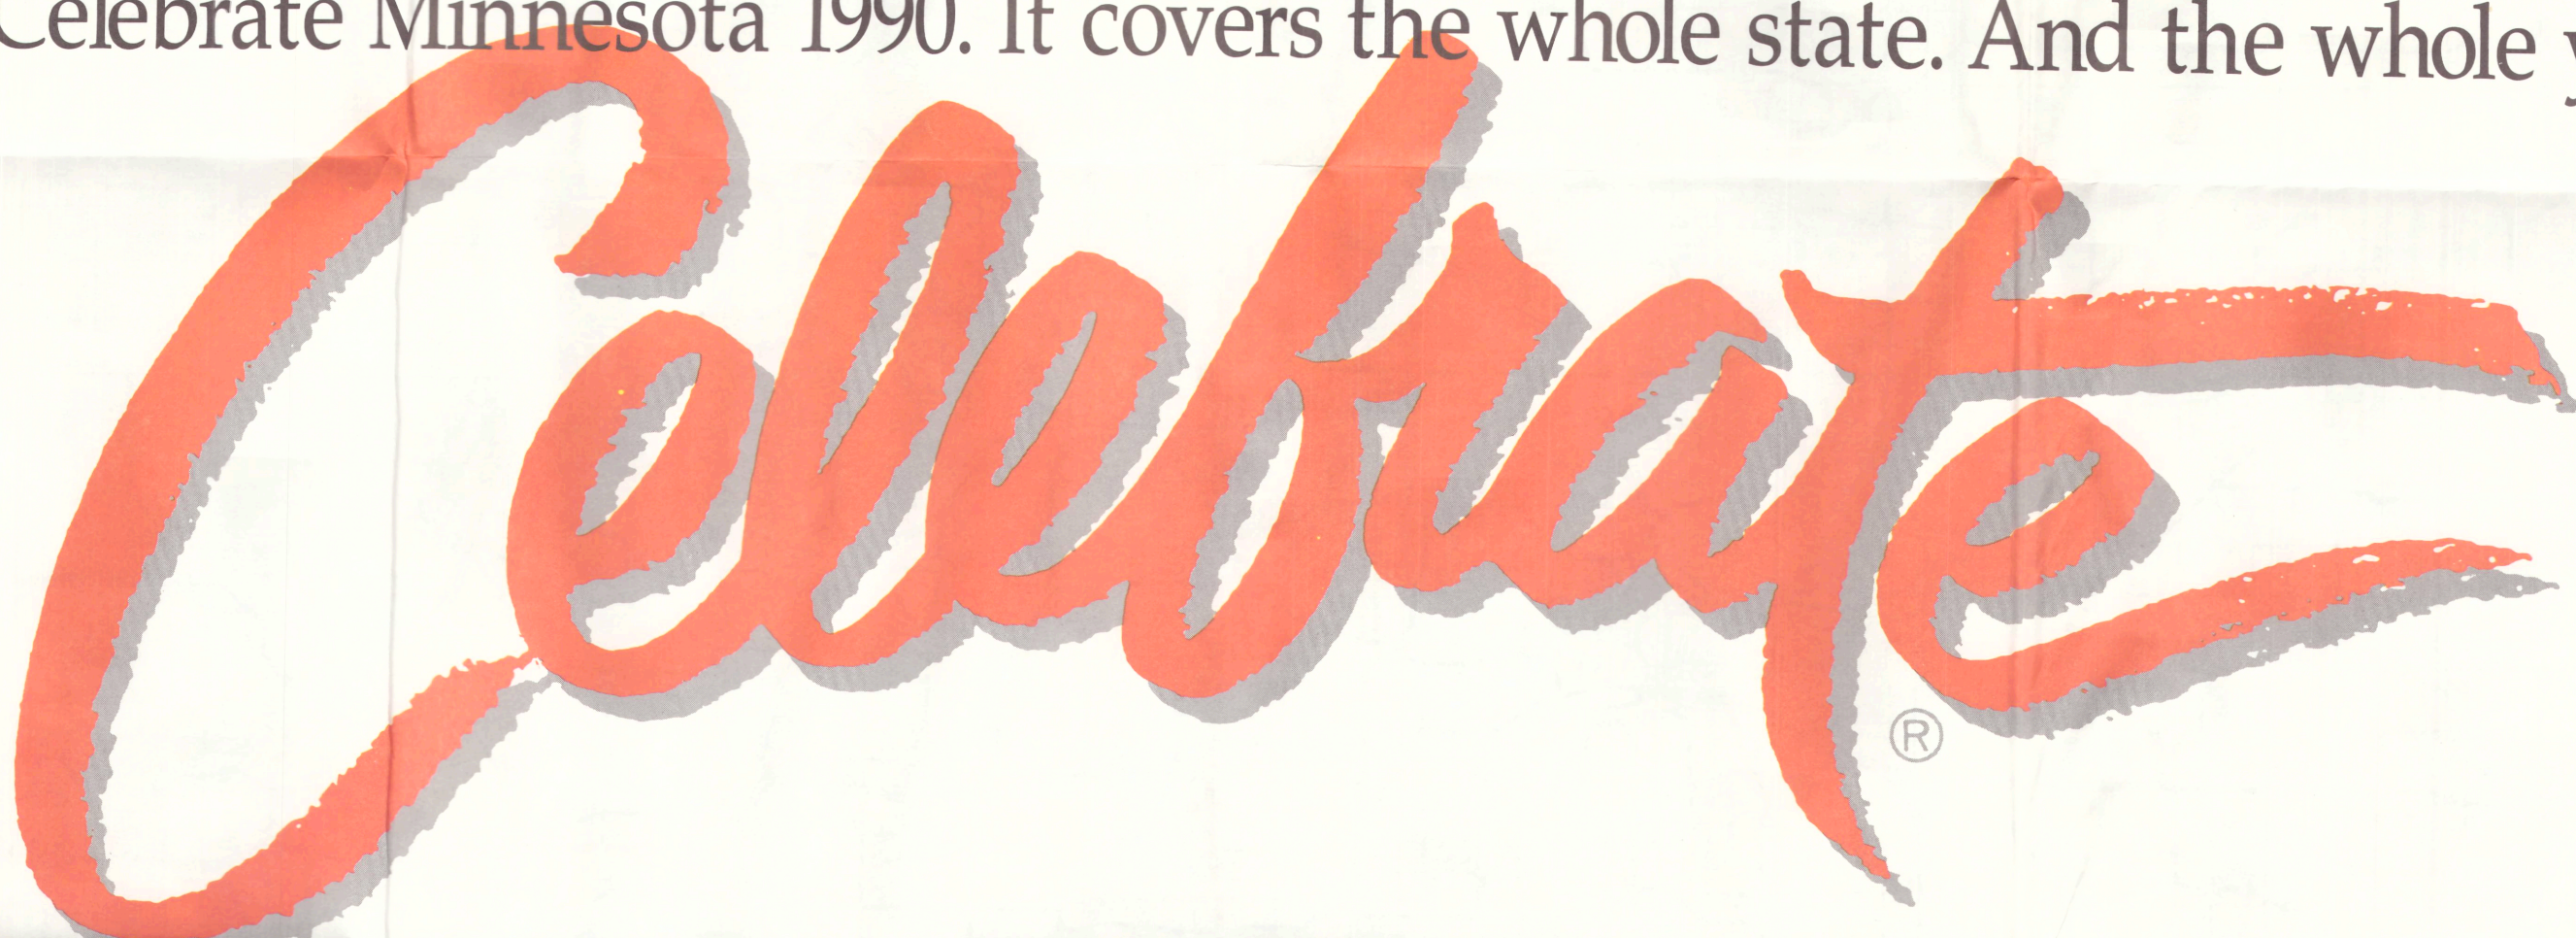

Or if you like to walk, camp or fish you will be able to take advantage of new sites and old favorites across the state.

FESTIVALS & REUNIONS

The excitement is building by the day. You can feel it in communities and neighborhoods across Minnesota as they get ready to stage a statewide "family" reunion as part of Celebrate Minnesota 1990.

Minnesotans young and old, current and former, will gather to show off their communities and accomplishments. Visit a craft festival. Relish the taste of delicious, Minnesota grown corn-on-the-cob. Dance in the streets at a harvest days festival.

Minnesota communities come together in 1990.

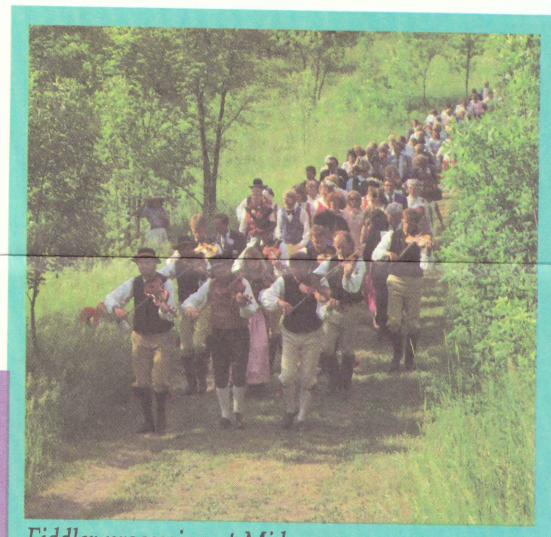

Events may last a day. Or they may go on all year. You will find them from the cities to the countryside. Wherever you see a Celebrate Minnesota 1990 road sign or banner. But no matter where they are, you can count on at least two things. You will be welcome. And you will have fun.

Music, dance, theater, visual arts — they're all a part of Celebrate Minnesota 1990.

ARTS & ENTERTAINMENT

Fiddler procession at Midsummer. A Minnesota Festival of Music

Bound to leave a lasting impression

You will be able to hear virtually every kind of music imaginable. Jazz sounding as it did in the speakeasies of prohibition. Rock and other contemporary favorites in outdoor bandshells and amphitheaters. Timeless classics performed by world-renowned orchestras in concert halls. And plenty of good old down home music just about everywhere else.

Dance under the starlight after a concert during Midsummer, an outdoor international music festival, held in Bloomington. Stroll through the magnificent art collection of Project Panza in St. Paul. Stand in amazement of a building-sized mural in a rural setting. Or relax to the music of outdoor concerts in city parks across the state.

The whole state will be on display during Celebrate Minnesota 1990. With enough artistic diversity to satisfy tastes from all over the nation.
